

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A flap device for influencing a flow cross-section in a medium-carrying conduit includes a control element in the conduit and a shaft portion arranged rotatably with respect to the conduit. The shaft portion and the control element are connected together in torsionally stiff relationship. The shaft portion is of a cranked configuration in a region thereof between the first and second ends.